Catastropher (A Short Story) Tomiko Breland

This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

When her husband disappears—leaving behind his wedding ring—practical, rational Beth begins to obsess about catastrophes. Soon she is researching and planning for disaster, from earthquake to nuclear war to tsunami, and creating a smaller and more sheltered world in which to hide. Her younger sister, Mona, is notorious for being flighty and irresponsible, yet as Mona realizes the extent of Beth's unraveling, she decides to put her own budding life on hold to care for her. But despite her best efforts, can Mona ever make the world safe enough? And how do you protect someone from a disaster that's already struck?
