The United States of Europe: A Pacifist Project (Europe Et Les Europes,) (French Edition)

Collection de l'Association internationale d'histoire contemporaine de l'Europe publiée sous la direction de Jean-Claude Faez. Bern, Berlin, Bruxelles, Frankfurt/M., New York, Oxford, Wien. The expansion of Europe marks the end of a process begun in 1867 by the League of Peace and Freedom, a European republican federation with a shared Constitution as a deterrent against internal conflicts, but which also set out to be a guarantor of world peace. This was the pacifist project advocated in Les Etats-Unis d'Europe, the journal of the League published in Switzerland with a name inspired by Victor Hugo. Its objective was to spread the idea throughout European civil society that the union of all European states could prevent war and promote economic prosperity. This volume is the result of the international collaboration of twenty scholars and covers the journal's alternating fortunes until the period following World War I. The essays trace its Saint-Simonian origins, analyse the proposals it advanced to solve international crises and the instruments for settling disputes (mainly arbitration), and place its contribution in the context of world pacifism between the 19th and 20th centuries. While the outbreak of World Wars represented a serious setback, the federalist commitment of Les Etats-Unis d'Europe undoubtedly played a fundamental role and sowed the seeds of contemporary Europeanism. L'élargissement de l'Europe d'aujourd'hui accomplit un vœu manifeste depuis 1867 par la Ligue de la Paix et de la Liberté, qui milita pour une fédération européenne et une constitution commune comme moyens de prévenir les conflits et de garantir la paix. Ce projet pacifiste fut défendu par les Etats-Unis d'Europe, journal de la Ligue publié en Suisse, dont Victor Hugo inspira le nom, et qui devait diffuser dans la société civile l'idée que l'union entre Etats européens pouvait éviter les guerres et promouvoir la prospérité économique. Ce livre, fruit de la coopération internationale de vingt chercheurs, rapporte l'histoire du journal de 1867 à 1933, largement inspiré à ses débuts par les idéaux saint-simoniens et constamment défenseur de la théorie de l'arbitrage international. L'histoire du journal est complétée par des contributions sur le pacifisme international à la charnière des 19^e et 20^e siècles. Après le coup d'arrêt brutal des guerres mondiales, ces idées ont réapparu dans les origines de l'europeïsme contemporain.
